would have a new retail model. After a number of cryptic tweets from bigwigs Reggie Fils-Aime and Doug Bowser, the official Nintendoland website posted a "coming soon" feature, giving us a look at some of the retailer's planned features. Grammar is not my strong point, but I've translated the original tweets to English (and included the original grammar errors, because I'm a quitter). Retailers are preparing Nintendo 3DS eShop for next week's launch of New Style Boutique and its regional version, La Nouvelle Maison Du Style. "We'll have exciting news for retailers about the service next week. "I can't share all of the details yet, but it involves a change in the way digital retail works. "I'm excited to see retailers make the jump to the new model in the coming weeks, and I hope it proves to be successful for everyone. "Thank you for your support and patience as we work to provide more information about this. Q: Find vertex color property of triangle in array I have a 2D array of triplets where I have 2 vertex coordinates and a color. I want to find the colors of the triangles (fancy word for triangle) in the array. I started with the simple code below, but the expected result is not right. I have 2 questions: What's the best way to find the vertices of the triangles? How to go about it? double
