Catchy Film "American Gangster" to win the Grand Jury Prize and the Audience Award. A gripping story of a young drug dealer in Harlem who rises to power in a corrupt New York City in the 1970s, and an ambitious lawyer who grows up in the South Bronx during the crack epidemic of the 1980s. By casting the young Denzel Washington as the head of a New York City gang, Scorsese may have predicted that the year 2008 would be seen as a pivotal moment in Washington's career. He made a thriller with "Antwone Fisher" in 2002, and a contemporary mob drama with "The Sopranos" in 1999. The last two years have been productive ones for the actor. In 2007, he won the Oscar for best actor for his role in "Denzel Washington: Man on Fire," and was nominated for best actor for the two previous films, "The Hurricane" and "Glory." But it was a successful run for "Good Hair," the drama that opened the 2007-08 season of the Primetime Emmy Awards. He was nominated in the best drama actor category, for his portrayal of the African-American hair stylist named James, who contends for his rightful place in the black community and becomes the unlikely superstar of a hair-care company. "He's so good in that role, he really inhabits it," said "Good Hair" writer-director Lisa Cholodenko. "He's not just good-looking -- he makes you believe he's a human being." He also won an Emmy in the same category for the made-for-television movie "In Justice." The roles have been fitting for the 38-year-old actor. "The Hurricane" was his first major studio film, and "Good Hair" was his first starring role in a major studio project. "Good Hair" has grown into a trend-setting story of "the rise of the 'rapper-like' hair stylist and his fashion-forward ideas," Cholodenko said. "It's the first non-big studio film with a hip style that could be nominated for best picture." "I 2d92ce491b
