. 1.4.1.1. . 2.1.2. 4/19/13 12:45pm: Two sources confirm that the Astros have exercised the option on Hunter Pence's contract. As expected, he will make $7.75MM in 2013, per Stewart. However, there is no word on whether or not the deal includes a third option year, like Rondon. 4/18/13 12:39pm: The Astros will exercise the 2013 option on pitcher Lucas Harrell's contract, reports FOX Sports' Ken Rosenthal. 4/12/13 11:54pm: The Astros are 'looking at' a trade for Mets righty Dillon Gee, but don't expect the club to be in on a deal at this time, according to Jon Heyman of CBSSports.com (on Twitter). 4/11/13 1:11pm: The Astros have "shown interest in trading for" Dillon Gee, reports MLB.com's Brian McTaggart. He notes that the club is still looking at other options in free agency. The Astros are not said to have particular interest in free agent right-hander Zack Greinke, he writes. Gee is three years removed from his age-27 season, which was by far his best, after he posted a 3.25 ERA with a 6.8 K/9, 2.8 BB/9 and a 45.5 percent ground-ball rate in 94 innings for the Mets last year. After his 2013 season, the Mets declined to pick up his club option for 2015, which was for $12MM, and GM Sandy Alderson remarked at the time that he was comfortable with the contract's four-year deal in order to make sure that he didn't miss on Gee. Of course, New York hasn't been a great place for pitchers, with just three starters producing an ERA of 3.00 or better since Greinke has come to town, with the Mets having the third-highest number of such seasons on record. Houston, on the other hand, has had great success on the free agent market over the last few years, as the club has been one of the only franchises to fill its rotation on a consistent basis since the start of 2010. Gee isn't the only potential fit for the Astros, as the club could be looking for a starter with an agreeable contract, writes the Houston Chronicle's Evan 3ef4e8ef8d
