Bhavani, written by K. S. R. Das, which in turn was inspired by the 1949 Bengali film Parash Pathar. It stars an ensemble cast of some of the most renowned film personalities of the era, including Anil Kapoor, Danny Denzongpa, Girish Karnad, Govind Namdeo, Aanjan Srivastav, Shobhna Samarth, Sadashiv Amrapurkar, and Rakesh Bedi. The film revolves around a rich Delhi police officer (Anil Kapoor) who works on the bizarre case of some missing girls in rural Haryana. He starts working on the case, and befriends a village girl (Namrata Shirodkar) who is forced into marrying a Mughal prince. The movie shifts focus to her friend, who was kidnapped and raped by a feudal lord, but is secretly in love with the police officer. Pukar was produced by actor Shashi Kapoor, while the music was composed by Naushad and Rajesh Roshan. Pukar was a major commercial success, and the soundtrack album received the Filmfare Award for Best Music (both music and lyrics) in 1983. The song "Dil se jalta ho gaya" became a chart-topper. The film was dubbed into Tamil, Telugu, Mal
