Southern Pomegranate (Punica granatum) Extract Increases Vascular Endothelial Growth Factor-Induced Extracellular Signal-Regulated Kinase Phosphorylation and Apoptosis in Human Retinal Capillary Endothelial Cells. Purpose: Methyl trans-p-coumarate (MTC), a type of isomer of a coumarin derivative, is an active ingredient in the fruit of Punica granatum. To elucidate the molecular mechanism of the reduction of retinopathy by MTC in vascular endothelial growth factor (VEGF)-induced retinal endothelial cells (RECs), we examined the effect of MTC on the phosphorylation of VEGFR2 by VEGF and on the activation of the downstream pathways including phosphatidylinositol 3-kinase/protein kinase B (PI3K/Akt) and extracellular signal-regulated kinase (ERK). Materials and Methods: We treated RECs with MTC and investigated the effects of MTC on cell morphology, cell viability, and apoptosis by MTC on VEGF-induced RECs. We also investigated the effect of MTC on VEGFR2 phosphorylation, Akt phosphorylation, and ERK phosphorylation in VEGF-induced RECs. Results: We demonstrated that MTC significantly reduced cell viability, and increased the number of apoptotic cells. MTC increased the phosphorylation of VEGFR2 induced by VEGF in RECs. Furthermore, MTC significantly increased the phosphorylation of Akt and ERK induced by VEGF. In the signal transduction study, MTC inhibited the phosphorylation of Akt and ERK, and increased the number of apoptotic cells in a manner depending on VEGFR2. Conclusion: MTC decreased VEGF-induced phosphorylation of VEGFR2, downstream signaling molecules, and cell viability in RECs. CESemanticsBrahma
