Allowing smokers to vape indoors would be cheaper than a ban, say experts. File image | Photo Credit: BCCL Mumbai: An executive order banning vaping in public places, passed by Maharashtra government in April, could be a costly measure for the State, say experts. The ban on vaping in public places is being challenged in court by the Delhi-based Central Vaping Forum. It has asked the Centre to stop the State government from imposing such restrictions on vaping. "We are of the view that the ban would be in violation of the fundamental right to life, property and personal liberty," lawyer Prashant Bhushan, who is part of the Central Vaping Forum, told IANS. Most importantly, he said, people are not able to smoke in close proximity to each other. "The whole case is about the right to smoke and the freedom of expression," he added. According to the Centre, the State is aware of this case, which challenges the executive order that "prohibits the use of electronic cigarettes and other similar devices in public places, including hospitals, educational institutions, government offices, restaurants and bars, and public transport." Allowing people to smoke in public places is often driven by the need to reduce exposure to secondhand smoke, experts feel. "However, the Bombay high court in its f30f4ceada
