Original Title Janda Pai Kapiraju.[Animal experimental study of the protective effect of thyrofosine against liver injury and kidney damage in rats]. The protective effect of thyrofosine against liver injury and kidney damage was studied by using a model of toxic liver damage induced by Aroclor 1254, a mixture of polychlorinated biphenyls, and the model of toxic kidney damage induced by silver nitrate. Aroclor 1254 was given to rats at 10 mg/kg and silver nitrate at 0.125% (w/v) intraperitoneally to rats at a dose of 100 mg/kg. Thyrofosine (20, 40 and 80 mg/kg) was given intraperitoneally to rats at 2 hours before Aroclor 1254 or silver nitrate. Serum levels of AST, ALT, LDH, GOT and GPT, hepatic concentrations of GSH and activities of SOD in liver tissues were assayed. Level of serum creatinine and the creatinine clearance rate were measured as renal damage. The results showed that the serum levels of AST, ALT, LDH, GOT and GPT, hepatic concentrations of GSH and activities of SOD, and the level of serum creatinine were elevated in serum after administration of Aroclor 1254 and silver nitrate, while pre

After ever day we try to make better and better the experience of our users and our website..Short-term recuperative ability of epididymis and testis after electrovaporization treatment for early prostate cancer. Objective: Epididymis and testis have been regarded as important organs participating in the recuperative process of the urogenital system after the electrovaporization treatment of early prostate cancer (ePC). We hypothesized that the recuperation of the epididymis and testis after ePC also was related to the degree of thermal injury of the prostatic tissue. We aimed to evaluate the recuperative ability of the epididymis and testis after ePC. Materials and methods: We examined 30 men who underwent ePC for ePC. Recuperative ability was determined by the degree of intraepididymal and testicular atrophy after ePC. Two independent observers evaluated the degree of atrophy with a semi-quantitative scoring system using formalin-fixed epididymal and testicular specimens. The degree of atrophy was scored as follows: no atrophy, (0-1 point); mild atrophy, (2 points); moderate atrophy, (3 points); and severe atrophy, (4 points). Results: The median scores for intraepididymal and testicular atrophy were 0 and 0, respectively. There was no statistically significant difference in the scores for intraepididymal atrophy between those who underwent ePC for pT2a disease and those who underwent ePC for pT3b disease. However, the scores for intraepididymal atrophy for the >pT3b group were significantly higher than those for the pT2a group. The median score for testicular atrophy was 0 for both groups. Conclusions:

Our results suggest that the recuperation of the epididymis and testis after ePC was related to the degree of thermal injury of the prostatic tissue rather than to the degree of intraepididymal atrophy. One of the three goals for the trip to Nanaimo was to get to the east coast. As a result of being on a boat for 24 hours, the food was not the greatest. I usually don't mind the boat food. Breakfast and dinner were decent but lunch was 3e33713323
