The 100,000-to-1 rule of thumb, that is, that a 100,000 pixels of image is equal to one original, means that to achieve the same quality with a 1,000-pixel square as the equivalent of one original square of 100,000 pixels, you would have to create an image four times as large. You can only save one final version of an image at any one time. Don't save a version in two or more formats. You may end up creating three final versions of the one original version of the image. You must save an image with a final format. If you save as a GIF or JPEG format, save the image before you exit Photoshop. When you save an image, save in a format that will accommodate the page that you will post the image to. For example, if you'll upload an image to a newsletter, save a TIFF format file, which is a scalable image format that accommodates all monitors. When you save the finished image, make sure you save it with a final format, such as TIFF or JPEG, if you plan to print the image. Figuring out how to crop and resize your images

The first step when working with an image is to determine its size. If you are working with an image from a camera or scanner, it may have an exact measurement for width, height, or size. If not, you can still determine the measurements by using Photoshop's Layers panel or by using the rectangle selection tool in the Tools panel. To display the Layers panel, you can either click the Layers button in the upper-left area of the workspace or press Ctrl+Alt+L. You can easily access the Layers panel from any of the panel tabs. The Layers panel can be used to open any existing image as a layer; it automatically opens the image to your current layer, allowing you to see it. To start the process of opening the image as a layer, follow these steps: 1. Click the document thumbnail in the Layers panel to open the file in Photoshop. 2. Click the New Layer button at the lower-left side of the panel to open the New Layer dialog box, as shown in Figure 9-6. 3. Click the word Open next to the New Layer button to open the image file. If the image file is a Photoshop file, you may have to click the option to open the file in Photoshop to open it.

SOUTH BERWICK, Maine (AP) — Two people died and many others were hurt in a crash involving a van and a car that left both sides of a busy thoroughfare littered with broken glass and wreckage. Buckingham Fire Chief Kenneth Therrien said a 17-year-old boy and a 57-year-old man died at the scene. Emergency crews are still trying to determine how many people were in the vehicles at the time. Therrien said one car veered into the opposite lane around 8:30 a.m. when the driver realized he was going too fast and slammed into the back of a Nissan Altima that was moving slowly through the intersection at Centre Street and State Street. The Altima was not hit, Therrien said. The Nissan spun out of control and hit the van, which was turning right on State Street and heading to the Hampton Inn. Therrien said he didn't know how fast the Nissan was going. In the back of the van, Therrien said the driver may have hit his head on a rear view mirror. Therrien said the van was carrying a large group of people and that the driver had to be extricated from the vehicle. He said that was the extent of his description of the crash at the height of rush hour. The South Berwick Police Department has not released the names of the deceased or the injured. Several victims were being treated at Berwick Hospital. No further details were immediately available. ————— Chris Kirchner can be reached at (973) 219-6319 or CKirchner@cmonitor.com.
