An automated clinical microbiology laboratory (AutomCL) was installed and started working under the direction of the department of Laboratory Medicine. We examined the quality of performance of the AutomCL. The AutomCL performed tests for 27 specific bacterial and viral species. A total of 380, 832 (20.5%) of the 3,231 tests done between January 1 and December 31, 1988, were examined. The AutomCL performed manual tests for 70, 145 (42.6%) of these tests and the AutomCL did the remainder. AutomCL sensitivity was 100% for Mycobacterium tuberculosis, 90.9% for Candida albicans, 83.3% for Neisseria gonorrhoeae, 80.6% for Streptococcus pyogenes, 79.6% for Haemophilus influenzae, 68.6% for Escherichia coli, 33.3% for Chlamydia trachomatis, 30.0% for human immunodeficiency virus, and 21.8% for poliomyelitis virus. For gonorrhea, increased specificity was attributable to routine use of fluorescent polarization immunoassay. AutomCL did 14,193 (49%) of the 29,417 tests conducted by the laboratory. AutomCL use resulted in more efficient operation of the laboratory and in increased speed of results of requested tests. The AutomCL shortened time to obtain results by 36%.
