the publisher I quickly buy an Amiga 1200 (FREE) and I jumped straight into it. I was amazed to see that there's a support for four player simultaneous play. Played two or three different RPGs and enjoyed the freedom of exploring new lands and fighting monsters. I also find it very convenient that you can switch between the medieval and modern worlds at will. I get a better gaming experience through the Amiga 500 than the MicroSoft Windows. I've recommended it to many of my friends. The latest game and the best must be "DayZ". I bought it from Grouper Island and it was $27.00. I played through two missions in the daytime and two missions in the evening. When sunset came around, I played one more mission before I quit. Now that you mentioned the DayZ game, I would love to have someone to play it with over the internet. I often go to the local library to enjoy a good game or two, but I've never played
