when trying to unit test a Singleton in Kotlin: class AppEngine(val application:

Application) { private val shared = object : Application{ get() { return application } } } val instance = shared } How could I test this in Kotlin? A: For unit testing, you can use the Mockito's in-memory database for this purpose. In Kotlin, the usage of the mock database would be something like this. class AppEngine(val application: Application) { val instance: Application by lazy { AppEngine(mock(application)) } val shared = object :

Application{ get() { return instance } } } class MyTest { @Mock lateinit var application:

Application @InjectMocks lateinit var appEngine: AppEngine val appEngineInstance = appEngine.instance val expectedInstance = object : Application{ get() { return appEngineInstance } } println(appEngineInstance) @Test fun `Single instance test`() {

Mockito.`when`(application.get()).thenReturn(expectedInstance) var actualInstance = appEngine.instance println(actualInstance

WallNotes Crack + Keygen Full Version [Mac/Win]

WallNotes is a simple sticky notes/to-do lists/text note window manager. You can use it to write simple notes, organize to-do lists, attach files to your notes, or use it as a news/calendar reader. It supports mostly transparent notes, so you can use it to write 'sticky' notes on the desktop. WallNotes is transparent and floating, so it can be moved anywhere on the screen (including outside the window) and can be resized manually. WallNotes Features: - Change colors of words, lines, and background - Option to highlight important words (click on the highlight, add text to the highlighted area) -

Option to change the foreground and background color of the note box - Toggle between Grid and Standard note layout - Option to toggle word-wrap (may cause the notes to vanish from the desktop when fully expanded) - Option to toggle the floating or fixed feature - Multiple note types supported, like text notes, to-do lists, and Fx news -

Option to create and edit notes on the desktop - Option to attach files to notes - Option to create a calendar - Option to create a news reader - Option to set interval for desktop update - Option to change the note box transparency level - Option to disable the notes size, so the wallpaper can be scaled - Option to lock note box when the notification of the news or calendar update is triggered - Option to enable/disable hiding the note box or disabling the desktop wallpaper update - Option to disable the floating feature (sticky notes will not move off the desktop) - Option to disable some of the messages the notification component may generate - Option to set the header colors in the note box

We are working on bringing this to mobile devices... But in the meanwhile there is a mobile version of this here WallNotes is a simple sticky notes/to-do lists/text note window manager.
